Description

Height 140 cm. Width of the top section 60 cm, weight approximately 220 kilograms delivered in 8 pieces to be assembled at home. This granite lantern style called kotoji is a copy of one that has become a symbol of the Kenroku-en garden in Japan. The shape of the legs is like a Japanese koto (harp) and one leg has a base that acts as a counterweight to balance the lantern. In Kenrokuen garden this impressive lantern is placed next to the shore of a pond in the water and floodlit at night – an idea you might like to emulate in your garden. A lamp can also be fitted to this lantern.
