A stand-out acer palmatum arakawa outdoor bonsai with cork-like, cracked bark. This moyogi-style tree grows rapidly and is a rare example for a collector. The rosy flower buds nestle in a splay of green maple foliage that turns dark green in summer, then red-orange in autumn. This deciduous variety resists the sun well. It's descended from a cutting, not by grafting and there are no signs of wounds or cut branches. It originates from Shiino Kentaro nursery in the Kanagawa prefecture.

Photographed without its leaves in February 2016, after repotting in a new pot, and with its foliage in summer 2015 in its old pot.
